THE materials for this genealogy were, for most part, gathered and arranged many years ago, but additions have been made from time to time as opportunity occurred. Records of the contemporary generation have in some instances been obtained only since the manuscript was in preparation for the press. This circumstance will account for an occasional lack of symmetry in the arrangement.

What relates to the first four generations and the later generations of the line of James Baker (b. 1739, d. 1825) was printed as a contribution to the New England Historical and Genealogical Register of July, 1889. The method and typography of the whole conform in general to the standard of that periodical.

Roman numerals are used to denote the children of each family in the order of seniority, and Arabic numerals to denote the heads of families. The exception to the latter rule is that a small figure appearing above the line, and called in type a "superior," is used to indicate the generation of each head of family and each of his direct ancestors. These superiors are used only in the introductory line of the paragraph relating to a particular family. It will readily be kept in mind that the children of the person thus designated are one generation later, and that the grandchildren, sometimes mentioned in the same connection, are two generations later than that indicated by such superior.

An Arabic numeral on the level of the line standing either before the particular name, or, enclosed in a parenthesis, after it, may be used repeatedly in conformity with the method referred to without confusion. This may be called the "personal numeral."

When so used it serves all the purposes of a surname. Upon gaining a slight familiarity with the text the reader will find, for example, each "John" to stand forth in mind in strong individuality, as "John (2)," "John (3)," "John (18)," "John (47)," etc., as if his surname were not Baker, but something else. In like manner children having no personal numeral, the several Sarahs, for instance, as daughters respectively of "John (2)," "John (7)," "John (37)" and "John (40)" become mentally distinct. In the use of these two classes of numerals, there is coincidence in the first three names only: Richard (1), John (2) and John (3) are also Richard,<sup>1</sup> John<sup>2</sup> and John.<sup>3</sup>

A lack of symmetry in failing to give certain heads of family a personal numeral has been explained. The enumeration having once been made it was impossible to interpolate, because of cross-references by number and for other reasons. An abbreviation for the name of the State follows any mention of a city or town out of Massachusetts, and that State is to be inferred where no such abbreviation appears. Where in the original record there were double dates, the earlier date, or "old style," has been used. In the preparation of the manuscript for the press the undersigned has had the assistance of Mr. Daniel W. Baker, son of Benjamin (48) of this series, who has collected some of the more recent dates and contributed certain biographical and historical matter.

EDMUND J. BAKER.

GENEALOGY OF RICHARD BAKER.

RICHARD<sup>1</sup> BAKER, the first American ancestor of those known distinctively as of the Dorchester family of Baker, arrived in this country from England in 1635. The date may be fixed with precision as November 28 of that year. In his journal of current events, Gov. Winthrop notes the arrival at Boston on that day of a vessel which he describes as "a small Norsey bark of twenty-five tons;" and he adds, "her passengers and goods all safe." This phrase, "Norsey bark," was for some time after the original publication of the "Journal," a mystery to the historians; but the later issue of Winthrop papers,* including letters written by Edward Hopkins† in London to John Winthrop, Jr., solved the mystery, for Hopkins in referring to the same vessel, calls it a "North-sea boat." He also used the word "barque" in designating the vessel. It is from these letters of Hopkins that the first information as to Richard Baker is derived, and they explain very clearly the circumstances of his coming to these shores. Edward Hopkins was the agent in London of a colonizing company or association, the chief members of which were Lord Say and Seal, Lord Brook, Lord Rich, Sir Richard Saltonstall, and others of influence politically and socially. They had obtained a grant of territory which included what is now the State of Connecticut, and were anxious to get military control of the region by establishing a fort at the mouth of the Connecticut River in anticipation of a like movement on the part of the Dutch of New Amsterdam, who also claimed possession or rights of trade there.

To this end the projectors needed a staunch vessel of light draft to ply between Boston and the mouth of the Connecticut during the building of a fort. This North Sea boat, which was named the "Bachelor," was obtained, and a master and crew of eight in all were engaged to sail the vessel across the sea and on coastwise voyages here during the construction of the fort. The vessel was laden with material, iron work, etc., suitable for such construction, as the invoice contained in Hopkins's letter shows. Four passengers were taken, Sergeant Lyon Gardiner,‡ a military engineer; his assistant, and the Sergeant's wife and maid. The letter of Hopkins containing the first mention of Richard Baker is dated London, Aug. 18, 1635, and states in the postscript that the Bachelor was cleared from Gravesend below

London on that day. It gives the names of the master and crew, Richard Baker being second in command, or "master's mate." The wages to be paid each and the terms of their employment are also stated. The letter was addressed to John Winthrop, Jr., the agent of the company in this country, and, as it was foreseen that he might be in Connecticut on arrival of the vessel in Boston, the alternative was added, "or, in his absence, to the worshipful Jno. Winthrop the elder, at Boston aforesaid." Hopkins speaks somewhat in derogation of a part of the crew, for which, as appears, he had good reason, and remarks in an explanatory way that "it was not easy here to get any at this time to go in so small a vessel." He remarks incidentally that "the master hath a desire, as he tells me, to continue in the country." He does not say that of the master's mate, with whom (Richard Baker being then a young man of not much more than one and twenty) he probably held no conversation. But the reasons effective with the master in the matter would likely to be so with the mate, and, if they related only to pursuit of the mariner's calling, there were with the latter other not less potent reasons.

At the last moment, when the barque was at Gravesend, four of the crew, whom Hopkins names, renounced their contract so far as it provided for service on the vessel in New England. "Whereupon," he says, "being put to some straits I was in a manner constrained to yield to their desires." Of the other four, one of whom was the master's mate, he says that they, "sticking to the former agreement, will be able, I conceive, with small help more, to sail the barque in the country." On the back of the next letter from Hopkins, dated London, 21 Sept., 1635, is a memorandum in the handwriting of John Winthrop, Jr., of four items, one of which reads: "3 bills of exchange of 30 li to be paid to Rich: Baker." These bills, forwarded by a vessel sailing a month later than did the Bachelor, indicate sufficiently on the part of the person in whose favor they run, not merely a desire but a purpose to continue in the country.

This recital of remote, and, in part, unimportant facts of record is pertinent here as evincing to those who will chiefly be interested in this genealogy that their common ancestor came to America under circumstances highly creditable to himself. They give proof that he was a man of great courage and of skill and resources in the mariner's art; that in an exigency which men of small soul took advantage of he was one of those who did equity by "sticking to the former agreement"; and that he was of a frugal habit, preferring to take passage where he would have nothing to pay out, but a considerable sum in pocket at the end of his ocean and coast-wise voyages. The bills of exchange may also be taken as evidence of a like habit in money matters while he was yet in his native land.

The next date of record of Richard Baker is November 4, 1639, when he became a member of the church in Dorchester. It is probable that he was married about that time. His wife, Faith Withington, is recorded under her maiden name as a member of the same church of earlier date. She was a daughter of Henry Withington, the ruling elder of the Church. The office was one of much honor, and various facts show that the family of Withington was one of social distinction. Mary, a sister of Faith, married Thomas Danforth,* who became deputy governor of the colony. Near relatives of Richard Baker were Thomas Baker, his brother, a resident of Roxbury and owner of the historical tide-mill* there; and John Baker of Boston, a nephew of both Richard and Thomas, who in different documents describes himself as "smith" and "mariner." These descriptive appellations do not indicate that he was merely an employé in either business. He was a prominent and enterprising citizen of the metropolis, and carried on business extensively. He died a comparatively young man, about twenty years before either of his uncles, and his inventory shows that he had acquired property in shipping† and real estate amounting to £799, a considerable estate for that period.

It does not appear of record that Richard Baker assisted in sailing the Bachelor coastwise, but his contract required him to do so if the owners desired. It is certain, as appears in others of the Winthrop letters, that the vessel was thus employed. If he was in that service, a part, at least, of the interval between 1635 and 1639 is accounted for. In the records of Dorchester, very soon after the latter date, he is put down as a considerable owner of real estate in that town. His homestead was a tract of land fronting southerly upon the road now called Savin Hill Avenue. The site of his dwelling-house was undoubtedly that of the building known to the contemporary generation as the "Tuttle Mansion." He added from time to time to the original area by purchase of adjoining lands.

One of these additions appears to have been a tract on the northwesterly slope of Savin Hill, where, up to a recent date, stood two dwellings known from time immemorial as the Baker houses. One yet remains. That which has been demolished was in all probability the house which Richard Baker, as he states in his will, built for his son John. The statement is made in connection with a bequest to this son of adjacent lands. Richard Baker bequeathed his homestead estate to his son James, who lived a bachelor. He in turn bequeathed it to his nephew John Wiswall, and the property remained in possession of the Wiswall heirs until 1826, when it was sold to Mr. Tuttle. The premises referred to as bequeathed to John Baker continued uninterruptedly in possession of some of his descendants till the year 1872.

Richard Baker was made a freeman of the colony May 18, 1642. He became a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company in 1658. In nearly every year from 1642 to 1685 his name is of record as exercising some office in the town administration of Dorchester. He appears not to have aspired to the highest station, and during only one year, 1653, is he recorded as a selectman. In 1668 he was elected a ruling elder of the church, but declined the office. Both in the town and the church records his name appears from time to time with those of others who were among the principal citizens in the making up of important committees. He was a proprietor in all the "Divisions" of town lands subsequent to the date of the "Great Lots." The "Divisions" covered much the larger area. The inventory of his estate amounted to £1,315 15s. He died Oct. 25, 1689; his wife died Feb. 3, preceding. Children:

He married Preserved Trott, July 11, 1667. He lived at Savin Hill, in the dwelling house already referred to.* The site is about two rods south-easterly of the present boundary of the street, and, in an air line, about 269 feet due north-east from the centre of the highway bridge over the Old Colony railroad. The house was occupied as a barrack for American troops during the siege of Boston. John Baker owned a large area of farming land, though his homestead tract was comparatively small. He appears to have been an efficient townsman, and served during a succession of years in different town offices. He died Aug. 26, 1690; his wife died Nov. 25, 1711. Children:

3. JOHN<sup>3</sup> BAKER (John<sup>2</sup> Richard<sup>1</sup>), son of John (2) and Preserved, was born in Dorchester, Nov. 25, 1671. He married Hannah Withington, May 16, 1708. His dwelling house was situated on "the great country road," so called, now Washington Street, in Dorchester. The site is three or four rods east of that street, and probably projects slightly upon the southerly sidewalk of the present Melville Avenue. The premises were bought by John Baker of William Stoughton,† as appears by deed of March 30, 1698. The house was occupied by the descendants of John Baker down to a date within the recollection of the oldest persons now living. It faced south, with the west end towards the road, and was of two stories in front, the long slope of the northerly roof making it to be one story in

As appears by deed bearing date, June 1, 1738, he bought of Ebenezer Mawdsley a dwelling house and ten acres of land bounded westerly by the highway leading to Boston, southerly by land of John Baker, easterly by Capen, and northerly by Robert Searle, Jr. The description is sufficient to fix it as near to the land which John Baker bought of William Stoughton, and fronting on "the great country road." Thomas Baker died Dec. 29, 1745; his wife died Oct. 5, 1758. Children:

He married 1st, Ruth Williams, Feb. 24, 1747; she died June 30, 1751, aged 34 years. He married 2d, Mrs. Mary Jones, April 11, 1753; she died Dec. 9, 1776, aged 54 years. He married 3d, Susanna Viles, Oct. 2, 1777; she died Sept. 26, 1810. He died March 4, 1810. in King's Chapel, in Boston, to Johanna Kiteley, Nov. 26, 1749. They lived for a while in Stoughton, where the two eldest children were born. The others were born in Dorchester. Circumstances indicate that the Dorchester residence was at Upper Mills Village, now Mattapan, and that he was employed in the paper-making business. He died in Springfield, Mass., June 1, 1759. His widow married a man named Morgan. She died in Dorchester, Sept. 8, 1814. Children:

He graduated at Harvard College in 1811, and afterwards began the study of law at Litchfield, Conn. While there his attention was drawn to the woolen manufacture. He relinquished the law and started a factory for woolen goods. The enterprise proved profitable during the continuance of the war with England, but ceased to be so on the general resumption of importations. Bringing this business to a close he spent some years at the South, taught school for a while at Natchez and carried on trade in New Orleans. In 1824 he took sole charge of the chocolate manufacture at Dorchester Lower Mills. The business had been well established by his father, who now retired. Under the new style of "Walter Baker" it became large, prosperous and widely known. After some previous service as an officer of the State militia Walter Baker was, in 1827, commissioned as colonel of the First Regiment, and thereafter was generally known and spoken of as "Col. Baker." He was a popular citizen and for many years a favorite presiding officer, or "moderator," of the Dorchester town meetings. He served three terms as representative of the town in the General Court, viz., in 1833, 1839 and 1840. His residence was at the southerly corner of Washington and Park streets in Dorchester, the site being indicated on the city atlas of this date by the name of Mrs. Baker. For many years the estate was owned and occupied by Lt. Gov. Andrew Oliver,* who undoubtedly built the mansion which still adorns the grounds.† The land was bought by Oliver in 1737, and, with the dwelling house, it was sold by his administrator to Benjamin Hichborn in 1782. Col. Baker married 1st, Deborah Smith Mott of Boston, March 10, 1825; she died Dec. 15, 1838. He married 2d, Eleanor Jameson Williams of Boston, May 14, 1840. He died May 7, 1852. Children:

One of his early surveys was of the towns of Dorchester and Milton, it being part of a general survey of the State, the law requiring every town to furnish a map of its territory. During these and subsequent years he was in political and personal affiliation with William H. Seward, Horace Greeley and Thurlow Weed. With the first named he stood in confidential relations. He edited the works of Mr. Seward, as published in five volumes, and wrote the memoir of the statesman which is their preface. During President's Lincoln's administration Mr. Baker was "disbursing agent" of the department of State. The service was of responsibility in pecuniary and other respects, and brought him into intimate relations with the President officially and led to the establishment of a personal friendship. In 1872 and 1873 Mr. Baker was "comptroller," or treasurer, of the District of Columbia. He married Eveline M. Stevens of Greenbush, N. Y., May 9, 1839; he died March 2, 1887. Children:

APPENDICES.

I. (p. 5).

EDWARD HOPKINS, born in England in 1600, arrived in Boston June 26, 1637, in pursuance of the enterprise of colonization in Connecticut. He was governor of Connecticut in alternate years from 1640 to 1652, when he returned to England, and was in the public service under Cromwell. He died in 1657. His bequest of £600, which came to Harvard College, was invested in wild lands, which in due time were taken up by settlers, and became the present town of Hopkinton, Mass.

II. (p. 5).

LYON GARDINER was born in England, and had experience in early manhood as a military engineer in active service in the Low Countries. He remained in Boston during the winter of 1635, and superintended an enlargement of the fort on Fort Hill. The barque "Bachelor" remained also, and in it he reached Connecticut in the spring, where he built a strong fort at the place now called Saybrook. His latter years were spent on the island in Long Island Sound called "Gardiner's Island" to this day, and which he owned. He died in 1663.

III. (p. 6).

THOMAS DANFORTH was born in 1622, and died Nov. 5, 1699. From the year 1657 to the latter date he was in public service in Massachusetts, occupying high stations, among them the offices of deputy governor and judge of the highest court.

IV. (p. 7).

THOMAS BAKER'S TIDE-MILL was on the stream called Stony Brook (anciently Stony river), where it flowed into the marshes of Back Bay, and became known as "Tide-mill Creek." The mill pond was partly the inflow of the tide and partly the outflow of the brook. The mill site is on the north-westerly side of the present Parker Street, one hundred and fifty feet north-east from the corner of Ward Street. It was known as "Baker's mill" as early as 1650, and the privilege and apparatus are mentioned as part of the assets in the inventory of Thomas Baker's estate in 1684.

V. (p. 7).

HENRY WITHINGTON was born in England, and died in Dorchester, Feb. 2 1666, aged 79 years. In his will he names Richard Baker as one of the executors, and Thomas Danforth as one of the overseers. The inventory of his estate shows a total of £850. 17s. Among the items are: "One sixteenth part of three ketches. £80; one half part of a warehouse in Boston. £50; one bag of cotton-wool. £5." The inventory of John Baker, nephew of Richard, shows that he had an interest in three ketches, appraised at £66. These facts certify to a familiarity with maritime business affairs on the part of the immediate relatives of Richard Baker, and, while they prove nothing as respects his vocation or business pursuits, are in harmony with the facts otherwise adduced as to that vocation in his early manhood.

VI. (p. 8).

THE JOHN BAKER HOUSE at Savin Hill was taken down in 1858. It is therefore within the recollection of many now living. Latterly it was often called the "Robinson House," having been bought by Maj. Edward Robinson after the settlement of the estate of James Baker (23). The data relied on in determining its antiquity are in part the records of deeds and of probate. One evidence of its antiquity is its plan and style of construction, which correspond to other dwellings of the earliest generation. The roof of the house was of the gambrel shape in front, and to the rear it made a long slope, the northerly eaves being scarcely more than six feet high. The dimensions of the ground plan, as measured by the still existing cellar-wall, were about 28 by 30 feet; the former being the front and the latter the side. The first floor was divided into four spacious rooms, and the attic had two moderate sized low ceiled chambers, the space in the rear of these being unfinished.

VII. (p. 8).

WILLIAM STOUGHTON'S RESIDENCE was at the northerly corner of Pleasant Street and Savin Hill Avenue, a mile and a half distant, north-easterly, from the house which he sold John Baker (3), and seventy-five or eighty rods easterly of the homestead of Richard Baker. The descriptions of partition deeds of Goy. Stoughton's homestead show that about 1748 the Avenue was known as "Baker's Lane." The region near the house of John Baker (3), in consequence of several of his descendants becoming owners and residents there, gained the name of "Baker's Plain."

VIII. (p. 10).

THE DWELLING HOUSE of John Baker (7) is still standing on the spot to which it was moved on Darling Street, facing easterly, though in its former position it faced southerly. The tradition of the Capen family is that the house was built in 1738, and it finds support in the fact of record that 1738 was the year of John Baker's first marriage.

IX. (p. 13).

Rev. JONATHAN BOWMAN was minister of the Church of Dorchester from Nov. 5, 1729, to Dec. 14, 1773, serving as colleague to Rev. John Danforth during the first six or seven months of that period. He married Elizabeth Hancock, who was aunt to John Hancock, signer of the Declaration of Independence. The dwelling house of Rev. Mr. Bowman in Dorchester is still standing on Pleasant Street, ten rods north from Creek Street.

X. (p. 13),

THE BEGINNING of this manufacture is fixed thus definitely by records contained in an old account book kept by James Baker (6), which still exists in perfect condition, as respects legibility, and the record is such, also, that it shows that the place of manufacture was at Lower Mills village.

XI. (p. 19).

XII. (p. 19).

Rev. BENJAMIN HUNTOON was first settled as a minister at Canton, Mass., in 1822, and later held the pastoral office in Milton and elsewhere. He was born in 1792, and died in 1864. One of his children was Daniel T. V. Huntoon, the historian and genealogist.

XIII. (p. 27).

ANDREW OLIVER was one of the commissioners appointed by the king in pursuance of the "stamp act." He held other high offices at different times, among them that of lieutenant governor under Thomas Hutchinson. The two were brothers-in-law, having married daughters of William Sanford of Newport, R. I. Though indisputably a "tory," his death before the opening of hostilities saved the estate of Oliver from being confiscated under the law as that of a "conspirator" or "absentee," and it took the usual course in being disposed of by his administrator.

XIV. (p. 27).

THE STately MANSION was not the sole attraction of the estate, for to the eastward it commanded an extensive view, limited only by the horizon line—the sea, and comprising the harbor with its islands and shipping. In these respects it vied with the Hutchinson mansion, which was about two miles farther south, in Milton, on the road which is a continuation of that in Dorchester, called “the great country road.”

XV. (p. 35).

FLORENCE TUCKER BAKER is of the line of Alexander Baker of Boston, who with his wife Elizabeth, arrived from England in 1635. One of his sons was Joshua, who was born in Boston in 1642; removed to New London, Conn. about 1670; married, Sept. 13, 1674, Mrs. Sarah Minster (or Minter), and died in New London, in 1717. A son of Joshua was John Baker, who was born in New London, Dec. 24, 1681, and who removed to Woodbury, Conn. His first wife was Comfort, and his second, Sarah. He died in Woodbury in 1750. His youngest son was Elisha Baker, who was born in Woodbury in October, 1724. Elisha married Phoebe Nichols, and lived at Bennington, Vt., and Williamstown, Mass. Ezra, a son of Elisha, was born in Bennington, June 19, 1762, studied medicine in Williamstown, and lived subsequently in New Jersey. Ezra married 1st, Sally, daughter of Samuel Tucker, governor of New Jersey; and 2d, her sister Eliza. A son of Ezra and Eliza was Benjamin Franklin Baker, born in Tuckertown, N. J., March 6, 1811. He married Sophronia J. Whitney, March 12, 1835. Their third child was Florence Tucker Baker.
